her beauty through keeping late hours She is bound not only for a homely middle age, but after the clock strikes 12 she invariably begins to leave the room with the flush of youth on their cheeks, their eyes brilliant, and every movement buoyant, and leave it with black lines under their eyes, their cheeks pale from exhaustion, their bodies wilted like the flowers they carry, a worn and haggard expression on their faces, and all beauty dissipated, just for the sake of the last few dances on their programs. dances on their programs.

Surely, if their eyes were open wide enough, they can see in their mirrors on reaching home just what havoc late van'ty, if nothing else, should keep girls from this sort of dissipation. They ought to realize that the final impression they make upon others is the only one that lingers. Their beauty in the carlier hours of the evening will be forgotten when their haggard ap-pearance is remembered. In such cases, last impressions count for even more than the first.

Late hours are a terrific drain on the health and strength. Each night that a girl remains out late she begins to lose her beauty a little earlier. Finally, the evening comes when she has no beauty to start with—it has all been sacrificed on the altar of a mad desire not to miss any pleasure. When beauty has fled, health soon takes wings, and the penalty is paid for draining the cup to the dregs.

roes is the possibility of people with her presence. This possibility of people with her presence. This possibility of people with her presence. This possibility is removed when she stops keeping late hours. She is more sought af-ter when her associates become aware that they do not have an unlimited time to enjoy her company.

Lillian Russell's Answers.

Frances: There is nothing prettier or more useful than the bracelet watch. And they may be made as beautiful and delicate as any piece of jewelry a woman may wear. The bracelet watch may be worn by man or woman with perfectly good taste. But the man must wear his watch incased in leather.

Marie: Singing is one of the most beautiful exercises known. It is necessary for the singer to breathe deeply and to hold the breath in for several seconds before expelling the air. A deep breath held for eight seconds expands the back muscles below the lungs, giving strength and beauty to the back and shoulders.

J. M.: A walking club is a good form of exercising. Do not have too many members—four is quite enough. Walk briskly, with head and chest up, abdomen in, and hips steady. The quick walk can be made to improve the carriage as well as general health. Never exercise in a close atmosphere. There is no danger of taking cold when in vigorous movement, and the fresh air is essential to health.

H. C.: There is usually some internal cause for dark rings underneath the eyes. They may be caused from lack of sleep, eye strain, or dissipation of any kind. The external treatment can only be temporary while the internal cause exists. Bathe the eyes with a good eye wash made of boric acid and water. Also rub them gently underneath with a good cream; be careful that you do not press on the eyeball. Apply a little melted vasseline to the lashes every night, but he careful that you do not get any of it into the eyes, for it will irritate them. It all depends on whether you can use glycerine on your skin. Some people cannot use it. Buttermik is a good bleach. Use it as you would water and allow it to dry on.

Katherine: There is a great deal to be remembered about color. When you go to a milliner's and begin to try on hats, just notice what the color of the hat does to you. If a bright red hat makes you look pale and hollow eyed, don't be persuaded into buying that hat and don't trust the milliner. If you are white skinned and colorless a green hat will make you look bilious, a black hat will make you look bilious, a black hat will make you look gray. What you need is a soft brown, or just the right shade of blue. Above all, you need something soft about the face. A roll of velvet over the edge of the brim will make all the difference in the world. And now, as you look at yourself in the glass, remember this: The first impression you get of yourself in the new hat is the best. The more you look at it the more accustomed to it your eye grows, until finally it is difficult for you to tell what is the matter. If the hat looks all right when you first put it on, if you have a feelling of satisfaction as you turn toward the glass and catch that first glimpse of yourself, then surely it is the hat for you.

And Colonel R. D., too, is worried. He writes, in a beautiful, scholarly hand resembling hieroglyphics: I am an old sufferer from chronic bronchitis. I suppose I have germs in my tubes—"bugs in grandfather's chest," as my niece puts it, after reading one of your talks. Have you any suggestions to offer for the management of my "bugs"?

Reply: Be a bit reckless in getting out for your daily constitutional; don't let a dark cloud or a gloomy barometer stop you. And, colonel, haven't you noticed how dietetic errors—little excesses of the, table, you know, due to your niece's fine cooking—make your cough worse temporarily? Why not have your doctor edit your diet? Or, if that seems too hard, join our Bread and Milk Club as a probationary member—no dues, just one day a week of plain bread and milk diet.

Distilled Water—J. H. A. asks if it is advisable to drink distilled water, and if so, will it cure constipation?
Reply—Not generally. Distilled water is pure, chemically and bacteriologically, and good to drink if you like it. But it won't cure anything which tap water or well-water won't cure.
